2018 ACE Academy

Hosted by the Idaho Division of Aeronautics and its many wonderful partners, the Aerospace Career Exploration (ACE) Academy is a summer program designed to introduce teenagers to the myriad careers available in the aviation and space industries.

ACE Academy is held simultaneously at several locations in the region. It engages participants through STEM-related experiential activities and field trips to facilities such as air traffic control towers, flight schools and aerospace businesses, college aviation programs, military aviation bases, and more. Other activities may include seminars on aerospace careers, as well as experiences with hands-on labs, drones, and even a flight in a small airplane.

While ACE Academy is primarily for 13 to 18 year olds, research has shown that parents and even teachers may experience some anxiety about science, engineering, technology, and math subjects. Research also has shown that parents are receptive to instruction on how to engage with their children in STEM learning activities, and that teachers need to experience the same hands-on, engaging learning environments and practices as their students.

Thus, we invite parents and teachers to participate alongside our teens on opening day of ACE Academy!

Enrollment is limited, and tuition is used to offset some of the costs. Limited scholarship assistance may be available for qualifying teenagers. Host families may be available for out-of-town participants who may need lodging during ACE Academy. Accommodations for those with special needs also may be possible with advanced notice. Locations, dates, and tuitions are shown in the following table:
