Transporting livestock

itd.idaho.gov/dmv

What you need to know about transporting livestock in Idaho.

If I am hauling livestock, do I need to stop at an Idaho Port of Entry?

Yes. There are two separate requirements.

- All vehicles entering Idaho with livestock must stop at a port of entry or roving port of entry check station. This applies to everyone, not just commercial haulers, regardless of vehicle weight.
- All vehicles within Idaho weighing more than 10,000 pounds transporting livestock must stop at a port of entry. This applies to everyone, not just commercial haulers.

What is the purpose of a livestock inspection and how long will it take?

Livestock inspections usually require 10 minutes or less. They:

- Deter theft
- Control the spread of disease
- Ensure trucks and trailers transporting livestock meet Idaho's vehicle safety standards

Failure to stop could result in a citation and considerable loss of time.

What animals are considered livestock and what paperwork do I need to enter Idaho?

Equine – horses, asses and mules

- Certificate of veterinary inspection (CVI)
- All stallions 12 months and older must have an equine viral arteritis statement on CVI
